FEWER SALOONS.

There is no cause for regret that the legislature has passed the bill limiting the salcons to one for every 500 of the population. That means 14 less saloons for Norwich in the end, and also that men who are now caught violating the law will be put permanently out of business.

The measure intends no injury to those engaged in the traffic, but provides for a gradual reformation upon more rational and more decent lines It puts the man who doesn't respect the law out of business the moment he is preved to be guilty. No new theenses are to be granted for applicants until the number has been brought down to the present number with the present privileges of appeal from the decision of the county commissioners, and the court's delays which enable miscreants to do a business without a li cense for months at a time, remains to he seen. The provision of the law which permits this sort of a performance certainly ought to be amended so that a speedy trial should be given men who are under the ban of con femnation, instead of in effect giving them an unwarranted liberty which is not promotive of the public wellbeing, or of a wholesome respect for

This law puts all the saloon keepers upon their mettle. They must have a care and obey the laws, or out of business they must go. It will be interesting to note whether this new condition prompts them to a closer observance of the law and a more careful conduct of their business.

BOATMEN NOT SWIMMERS. It is strange that of 48 men who

What an absurdity in a city situated like ours, in boat clubs whose members have every facility for acquiring this ability? Would it be too severe to debar from a rowing regatta any man who had not 'had time' to learn to swim? When the art of swimming is so easily acquired, it is supprising that in an event of this kind 60 per cent. were unable to save themselves from drowning in case of accident. THE DANGEROUS PROMINENT CITIZEN.

If the Hon. John Logan, mayor of Worcester, is correct, the undesirable citizen is not always a resident of the slums or a man of criminal record. In an address recently made by him and printed in The Congregation alist and Christian Herald, he said:

some of those signers felt about it, so I took occasion to bring up the subject in an incidental way with five different men whose names were on that petition whom I chanced to meet within a week, and every man expressed the hope that the city government would turn the petition down, but not one of them had moral courage enough to say No when the petition was presented to him for his signature. Now, I submit it is not fair, or just, or honest, to dodge a plain duty in this way, to ask your servants to do what you don't really think ought to be done, and thus throw the responsibility on other men, with the hope that they will have the nerve to hope that they will have the nerve to do what you don't dare to do your-

"Why, it's terrible!" declared the Think how the most trivial decision of some one you haven't any particular interest in can affect your whole life! It isn't right. It does away with your chance of being a free agent. It makes you a mere puppet.

"Take your grandfather, for example. Of course, you respected your grandfather, but maybe he died when you were so young that you do not remember him. If so, you can't be blamed for not taking an absorbing, heart-thrilling interest in him! You don't care in the least whether or not on September 16, 1859, he decided to cut down two trees for firewood. You wouldn't blink an eyelash if he had obeyed his first impulse and gone to town with the fat cow he had sold the butcher. That's because you don't re-Think how the most trivial decision obeyed his first impulse and gone to town with the fat cow he had sold the butcher. That's because you don't realize what the five minutes of making up his mind means to you here in 1895.

"You see, in chopping the second tree he let the ax slip and it severed an artery in his foot. The nearest doctor the hired man could reach was the new one, whom nobody would employ because he didn't have whiskers all over his face and was a newcomer. Besides curing your grandfather the young doctor fell in love with and married his daughter, Mary Ann. After he arose in his profession they moved to the city and their son was you and naturally you studied medicine, having lived in the atmosphere of drugs all your life.

"Now, if the young doctor hadn't been precipitated into the bosom of the family, so to speak, all in a hurry, sort of forcing the acquaintance with Mary Ann, she probably would have been asleep he yawned once too often next day and the train ran off the track and was smaahed up and old York with a mining scheme that at last York with a mining scheme that at last the office boy threw a banana peel on the walk, and she slipped on it and was saved from failing by Orville Smallbill, was saved from failing by Orville Smallbill, was saved from failing by Orville Smallbill, made up his mind he want-sed her and hung on with a buildog grip till in sheer respair she accepted him to get rid of him—she will marry him and live in a fait and spend two weeks every summer n the country and call it travelling! And all because Mrs. Delancey got mad at a dressmaker!

"Think what that would have meant to Sallie!

It is safe guessing that the average person in Norwich knows a lot more about the city in which he lives than he did before the celebration.

The various pageants, the universal placarding of historic places about the town, will give an impetus to historical research among old and young.

This is one of the admirable results of such undertakings which is sometimes lost sight of. Many things in geography and history will take on new significance for the school children and what perhaps seemed at one the present law.

It is something when a man like John Mitchell, the labor leader, speaking at a great gathering of people like that at the recent anniversary celebration at Norwich in this state, and epitemizing the position of the labor union in the social evolution of the nation, puts the meaning of it above wages, above shorter hours and on the plane of high principle and good citizenship. Mr. Mitchell is reported by The Norwich Bulletin as follows: "Vice President Mitchell referred to the martyrs who had brought to the cause the blessings of God, and brought it out that organized labor stood for more than higher wages and shorter hours, viz.: Higher citizenship, better manhood, nobler womanhood and the defense of the helpless child."
